JOHN FRY PRIZE

Submission deadline: Wednesday 3 June 2015 5pm GMT
Word count: 2500 – 3000
Prize: £300 and an invitation to present their winning paper at a GP meeting (usually prior to the John Fry lecture)
Open to: GP registrars, postgraduate students based in primary care, medical students and other undergraduates from professional groups involved in primary care, and patients with experiences from primary care

Submission process:
Over the course of a three year rotation each of the following will be the theme for one year.

1. An account of an audit or research project carried out in primary care.
2. A reflective account of a health consultation in your primary care practice.
3. A reflective account of an example of team working in primary care.

For the 2014/15 academic year applicants will be asked to submit An account of an audit or research project carried out in primary care.

Submissions should be well referenced and will be judged on the following criteria:

- Does the paper, in the spirit of John Fry, positively inform best practice involving members of the primary health and social care community, with reference to:
  - Accessibility, clarity, cogency and relevance
  - Rigour, reliability and replicability- if quantitative research

Or

- Transferability, confirmability and dependability- if qualitative research

Or

- Clarification of relevant issues, development of alternative approaches, informing future practice - if reflective account
- Improving practice
- Contributing to evidence based practice within and between professions
- Lessons learned enhancing understanding of team roles and relationships in research and practice
